

reflective practice for social pdf

Perhaps most important though is the fact that reflective practice helps social workers to have a deeper understanding of themselves and their practice. This improves practice for the most important people engaged in social work – the users of the service. Why? PG to Reflective Practice_Booklet.indd 68-69 01/11/2010 11:40

The Social Work Pocket Guide to Reflective Practice

Reflective practice improves social work intervention as it: Helps practitioners to identify gaps in their skills and knowledge. This helps them to identify their learning needs and improve their practice. Encourages practitioners to analyse communication and relationships. This means that relationships can be improved.
